CEI Nursing Program – Background Check Review for Admission

Admission to the CEI Nursing Program (LPN or RN) requires completion of a background check. Background check information is reviewed as part of the overall admissions process and is considered in light of clinical placement requirements, patient safety, and program standards.

Because nursing students must be eligible to participate in required clinical experiences, admission decisions may reflect not only college requirements but also the standards of affiliated healthcare facilities. These standards vary and may change.

Applicants should be aware that:

- Completion of a background check does not guarantee admission.
- Eligibility for nursing licensure or prior employment in healthcare does not ensure program eligibility.
- There is no guaranteed timeframe after which prior background information no longer impacts admission.

In some cases, applicants may be invited to provide additional information or context related to their background check. This opportunity, when offered, is intended to allow the program to better understand an applicant's circumstances. Submission of additional information does not guarantee admission or a change in decision.

Each application is reviewed individually based on the information available at the time of review. In evaluating background check information, the program may consider factors such as the nature and seriousness of the conduct, the time elapsed, patterns of behavior, relevance to patient care, safety of staff, students, and patients, and potential impact on clinical placement eligibility. Admission decisions are final.

Applicants are encouraged to consult the Idaho Board of Nursing and other relevant regulatory agencies for guidance regarding future licensure eligibility.
