Hope Morrow – Vice President, Workforce Training & Continuing Education

Hope Morrow serves as Vice President of Workforce Training at College of Eastern Idaho (CEI), bringing extensive experience in workforce development, regional energy strategy, and industry partnerships. Prior to joining CEI, she spent more than seven years leading Workforce and Economic Development Programs at Idaho National Laboratory (INL), where she advanced regional strategies to strengthen talent pipelines and support economic growth.

Throughout her career, Morrow has played a key role in building partnerships among industry, education, and government to address evolving workforce needs. She serves as Policy Chair on Governor Brad Little's Workforce Development Council and co-founded the Idaho Advanced Energy Consortium. She also helped lead a two-state initiative supporting the INEC Tech Hub, securing more than $40 million to advance innovation and workforce development across the region.

A longtime Idaho resident, Morrow is deeply committed to expanding educational and career opportunities throughout the state. Through her collaborative leadership approach, she focuses on aligning workforce training with industry needs, strengthening regional partnerships, and creating meaningful pathways for Idaho students and workers.
